UN Volunteers in safe spaces: helping refugee women and youth on the move

In the months since the start of the war in Ukraine, UN Volunteers have provided mental health, psychosocial support, first aid and access to health care to those affected. These volunteers serve with UN partners in countries neighbouring Ukraine. In Romania and Moldova, UN Volunteers support the safe space initiatives of the UN Children's Fund (UNICEF), UN Refugee Agency (UNHCR) and UN Population Fund (UNFPA).

UNICEF and UNHCR, in partnership with governments and civil society organizations, have set up 26 Blue Dot safe spaces for children and women in bordering countries, each able to provide relief for 3,000-5,000 people per day. They are also mobilizing to treat the mental and emotional damage caused by the conflict.

In Romania, Marina Feher became a national UN Volunteer with UNICEF to help the Blue Dot initiative, focusing on refugees in Isaccea, Tulcea and Galati areas.

“ Day-by-day, I help to make the new Blue Dot initiative fully functional to provide critical support to the refugees crossing Romanian border points. I gather key issues from Ukrainian refugees and help Ukrainian refugee students access education here in Romania, giving them hope for proper inclusion. --Marina Feher, UN Volunteer Blue Dot Operations Officer with UNICEF in Romania

With UN Volunteers, the Blue Dot initiative gained more capacity to be on the frontline, close to the refugees, to better understand their needs and ensure that the appropriate response measures are put in place.

“ UN Volunteers provide us with a dynamic new point of view, to have a direct link and understanding with the field-based staff of our partners and to reinforce UNICEF’s legitimacy and visibility, not only in the field, but also at the regional and national level. --Diana Schirca, Human Resources Officer with UNICEF Romania

In Moldova, three UN Volunteers serve as Psychosocial Support Officers with the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA). They support sexual and reproductive health outside Chisinau at the refugee placements, including the border point of Palanca.

Orange spaces are safe and friendly venues that provide a physically, emotionally and socially protective environment for youth and women. They are dedicated to adolescents and youth aged 10 to 24 years and women of all ages. These orange spaces offer a combination of protection, psychosocial, referral and recreation services, as well as activities aiming at developing life skills, building emotional resilience and preventing gender-based violence.

The UN is grateful for the compassion and solidarity of Ukraine’s neighbours, who are taking in those seeking safety. In support of its partners, UNV is continuing the recruitment of national and Refugee UN Volunteers in Bulgaria, Czech Republic, Hungary, Moldova, Poland, Romania and Slovakia.
