UNV in China: 30 years of collaboration

UNV is pleased and proud to celebrate 30 years of collaboration with the People's Republic of China. A chronological and thorough overview of the long-standing interaction can report significant progress, as well as a shifting focus toward areas like innovative social technology, greening social engagement and stronger civic participation in China, especially in an affluent-eastern/poorer-western perspective and ethnic minority perspective.
UNV in China: 30 years of collaboration

Within the past twenty years, Southern upper-middle-income countries such as China, India and Brazil have demonstrated high rates of economic growth at an unprecedentedly rapid rate. China is now one of the world’s leading economies and an emerging international aid donor. Internally, it is focusing on strengthening social safety nets and ensuring that marginalized communities are also able to enjoy prosperous lives. As China continues its dynamic development trajectory, UNV looks forward to its longstanding cooperation with China in emerging areas that best match China’s new national and global priorities.

- Promote culturally-appropriate development opportunities in ethnic minority communities
- Go global: Share China’s volunteering expertise with other developing and middle-income countries through South-South cooperation
- Increase the number of Chinese serving as International UN Volunteers abroad and China’s participation within the multilateral community.

Support social innovations, e.g. social media technology, youth-led “grass social enterprise” and public-private partnerships, to improve volunteering infrastructure and civic participation in China.

Strengthen volunteer-based public service linkages between affluent eastern regions and poorer regions in central and western China.

Since 1981, UNV has nurtured an active and fruitful partnership with the Government of the People’s Republic of China. Together they support social and economic development throughout the country and promote the sharing of China’s expertise with other countries through the framework of South-South cooperation. About 100 Chinese nationals have served as international UN Volunteers in places including Cambodia, Kosovo and Sudan. Furthermore, 327 UN Volunteers (national and international) have also served in China, coming from countries such as Germany, Great Britain, Italy, Malaysia, the Philippines, Switzerland and the United States of America (USA). A former UNV Programme Officer was the second foreign national to be awarded the prestigious “Youth Outstanding Youth” award by the Central Youth League of China.
UNV is pleased and proud to celebrate 30 years of collaboration with the People's Republic of China. A chronological and thorough overview of the long-standing interaction can report significant progress, as well as a shifting focus toward areas like innovative social technology, greening social engagement and stronger civic participation in China, especially in an affluent-eastern/poorer-western perspective and ethnic minority perspective. Moreover, such a track record can set a benchmark for the future of superior internal social safety nets and protection of vulnerable social groups. UNV's collaboration with China offers yet another example of a fruitful South-South cooperation. Over a hundred Chinese UN Volunteers have served on international missions, while over 300 UN Volunteers have taken on challenges on site in the country. UN Volunteers in China are well on their way to improve volunteer management capacity and share China's experience in volunteerism nationally and internationally.
