

Mechanisms for Citizen Engagement and Measurement for the Implementation of Agenda 2030

When

Friday, 2 March 2018, 8:30-9:45 a.m.

Where

International Conference Centre of Geneva; Room 4

Why Volunteerism and Agenda 2030?

Globally there are an estimated 1 billion volunteers carrying out a range of roles in their communities and societies. Volunteer groups are formally recognized as important stakeholders in achieving the SDGs.

This session will provide guidance on how Member States can work to strengthen their analysis and reporting through the integration of national data on volunteerism. In particular, how to:

1

Include qualitative and quantitative data on volunteer efforts

2

Reach out to ordinary citizens so that they can become drivers of their own development

3

Provide a narrative on social inclusion and leaving the furthest behind first

Target Audience

Anyone who is passionate about citizen engagement, including Member States, UN entities, civil society and volunteer involving organizations, academia

The session will be run by UN Volunteers and the International Labour Organization.
