Annual session 2012

25 to 29 June 2012, Geneva

Item 7 of the provisional agenda

United Nations Volunteers

United Nations Volunteers
Report of the Administrator

Summary

The present report provides an overview of results achieved by the United Nations Volunteers (UNV) programme during the 2010-2011 biennium, in support of programme countries and United Nations organizations in their peace and development efforts, including achievement of the Millennium Development Goals (MDG). It also identifies challenges and opportunities, especially in response to the Five-year Action Agenda of the United Nations Secretary-General.

The structure of this report follows the UNV business model. Statistical annexes on volunteers, a financial overview and a results framework are posted on the Executive Board website.

Elements of a decision

The Executive Board may wish to: (a) take note of the report of the Administrator; (b) commend UNV for the successful commemoration of the tenth anniversary of the International Year of Volunteers (IYV+10); (c) commend UNV for taking the lead in producing the first State of the World's Volunteerism Report and encourage UNV to continue its publication; (d) express appreciation for the outstanding contribution of the high number of UN Volunteers to peace and development achievements of programme countries and United Nations partners, including the continuous growth in the number of online volunteers; (e) encourage UNV to expand volunteering opportunities for young people, as outlined in the Five-year Action Agenda of the Secretary-General, and to this effect decide to establish a trust fund for the creation of a youth volunteer corps under the umbrella of UNV; (f) encourage UNV to continue to innovate and diversify volunteer modalities, including those involving South-South cooperation, regional approaches, diaspora and private sector volunteer opportunities; (g) take note of the UNV development of a results framework to measure its programmatic contributions to peace and development; (h) call on development partners and all UN Member States to increase funding to the Special Voluntary Fund to conduct research, training and pilot innovations and to other funding modalities; (i) encourage governments, UNDP and United Nations organizations to recognize the contributions of volunteerism to community-centred sustainable development and well-being by integrating volunteerism into their programming; (j) call upon UNDP to continue to provide to UNV all necessary programmatic, administrative and legal support to deliver on its mandate; (k) encourage member countries to recognize national and international UN Volunteers as an integral part of United Nations assistance and provide them with the facilitation and protection necessary to perform their functions effectively; and (l) encourage UNV to continue its active engagement in discussions for the United Nations Conference on Sustainable Development in Rio de Janeiro in June 2012 (Rio +20) and post-2015 development priorities to mainstream the recognition of the vital role played by volunteers in peace and development.

I. Introduction

1. This report highlights achievements by the United Nations Volunteers (UNV) during the period 2010-2011 and follows the same structure as previous reports to the Executive Board. Special attention is given to reporting results of the tenth anniversary of the International Year of Volunteers (IYV+10), gender and youth.
2. UNV programme outcomes are articulated along the UNV business model, as approved by the Executive Board in its decision 2006/18. Key results are reported under three major components: (a) global recognition of volunteerism for peace and development; (b) integration of volunteerism into peace and development programmes; and (c) mobilization of increasing numbers and diversity of volunteers contributing to peace and development. Organizational support functions are described in the management results chapter.
3. The last chapter outlines challenges and opportunities, with special attention to opportunities resulting from the Five-year Action Agenda of the Secretary-General. The three annexes – statistical overview on UN Volunteers (1), financial overview (2) and the results framework (3) are available on the Executive Board website.
4. Total direct donor funding to UNV increased by 12 per cent to $38.8 million in 2010-2011. However, contributions to the Special Voluntary Fund (SVF), which are critical for continued advocacy of volunteerism, innovation in volunteer modalities and the production of norm-setting knowledge products, declined by 14 per cent and now represent only 3 per cent of UNV resources.
5. The total financial value of UNV activities in 2010-2011 increased by 10 per cent to $473 million. Sixty-six per cent of these resources come from United Nations organizations, showing a continued strong demand for the services of UN Volunteers.¹

II. Programme results

6. UNV continued to advocate volunteerism as a strategic asset and a powerful contributor to peace and development. The organization also worked on integrating volunteerism into peace and development frameworks at the global, regional and national levels and on mobilizing quality UN Volunteers through a number of different modalities.

A. Global recognition of volunteerism for peace and development

7. UNV advocated for recognition and support for the contribution volunteerism makes toward achieving the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) and national peace and development goals by better documenting the impact of volunteerism, promoting partnerships, raising awareness and obtaining formal recognition for volunteers and volunteerism.
8. Knowledge building and sharing remains the foundation of effective advocacy and programming and is critical in sensitizing partners. The most notable achievement during the biennium was the production of the first ever State of the World's Volunteerism Report. Other knowledge products, including partnership orientation guides, thematic papers, programme practice notes, social media platforms/campaigns and audio-visual materials, were created in partnership with different stakeholders. UNV also contributed to national, regional and global studies, reports and research on volunteerism.

Key result 1.1. Status of volunteerism and its contribution to development is documented and shared

9. International Volunteer Day on 5 December 2011 marked the culmination of IYV+10. Two sessions of the United Nations General Assembly were devoted to the topic and a resolution on volunteerism (A/RES/66/67), co-sponsored by 97 countries, was passed by consensus.

10. The State of the World's Volunteerism Report was launched in the General Assembly and around 80 other locations around the world. The report promotes a better understanding of volunteerism, dispelling widely held misconceptions about its nature, reach and impact. It provides an initial measure of the worldwide contribution of volunteerism to social inclusion and cohesion, livelihoods and more generally the well-being of individuals and societies. It concludes with a call to make volunteerism an integral part of a new development paradigm. The report received broad media coverage, with over 300 news items issued just after the launch, and is now the topic of academic analysis and debate and has become a reference for informing policy discussions.

11. To enhance recognition of volunteerism at global, regional and national levels, UNV participated in and supported 41 different advocacy events in Barbados, Cambodia, China, Colombia, Egypt, Mexico, Mozambique, South Africa and Uzbekistan. Additionally, dozens of national and local advocacy events and campaigns took place in 13 crisis countries or territories from Afghanistan to South Sudan, demonstrating the resilience of fragile states and how they harness the power of volunteerism.

12. Twenty-nine national and regional reports and studies highlighting the contribution of volunteerism to development in various countries were published. Knowledge products, including practice notes and handbooks on topics such as youth development, adolescent volunteering, cultural volunteerism and volunteer management and training, were developed in the Arab states, Asia, the Commonwealth of Independent States, Latin America and South-eastern Europe. A publication entitled Roadmap to Corporate Volunteering in Trinidad and Tobago was prepared. In Sierra Leone, in cooperation with Voluntary Service Overseas in the United Kingdom (VSO UK) and other partners, UNV undertook a survey on national volunteerism as a development resource. UNV newsletters were published in 29 countries and disseminated widely. Over 130 articles were contributed by volunteers to the UNV website and 16 country-level UNV website and Facebook pages were launched. UNV participated in interviews and talk shows on national television in almost 50 countries.

13. Knowledge products on volunteering and gender practices were published, such as Making a Difference: An Assessment of Volunteer Interventions Addressing Gender-based Violence in Cambodia and Gender and Climate Change and Community-Based Adaptation: a Guidebook for Designing and Implementing Gender-Sensitive Community-Based Adaptation Programmes and Projects. UN Volunteers joined CIVICUS in the publication of Broadening Civic Space Through Voluntary Action: Lessons from 2011.

Key result 1.2. Partnerships to promote volunteerism for development built and strengthened with and among UNV key stakeholders

14. IYV+10 gave UNV the opportunity to join forces with many partners and stakeholders, strengthening old and developing new partnerships, notably with the sustainable development-focused non-governmental organization (NGO) community. UNV co-organized with the United Nations Department of Public Information (DPI) and the City of Bonn the 64th Annual DPI/NGO Conference on 3 to 5 September 2011. About 1,300 participants from 350 NGOs and 90 countries participated, bringing a substantive contribution to the debate on volunteerism within the context of sustainable development and preparing for the United Nations Conference on Sustainable Development in Rio de Janeiro (Rio+20) in June 2012.

15. UNV led five regional workshops gathering over 300 officials from 144 governments, civil society and leading volunteer organizations that reinforced volunteering networks in each region and highlighted the positive impact of volunteerism. Recommendations from the workshops fed into the first Global Volunteer Conference: Volunteering for a Sustainable Future held in Budapest, Hungary from 15 to 17 September 2011. Organized jointly by UNV and the International Federation of the Red Cross/Red Crescent Societies (IFRC), the conference assembled 200 participants from 70 organizations and 85 countries, including academia, civil society, governments, IFRC, national societies, NGOs, the private sector and the United Nations. The conference declaration² called on all sectors of society to prioritize volunteerism.

16. More than 60 national committees and volunteer coordinating bodies marked the IYV+10 anniversary year. Joined by local affiliates of IYV+10 global stakeholders, they worked on national issues and deliberated local perspectives on Rio+20 and post-MDG debates. Around 38,000 followers joined the global volunteering discussion via UNV social media.

17. New partnerships were forged at regional and country levels with governments, United Nations organizations and development partners, specifically in: Afghanistan, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Chad, China, Colombia, Côte d'Ivoire, Ecuador, Egypt, Guinea, Haiti, India, Indonesia, Jordan, Lebanon, Lesotho, Rwanda, Togo and in various Pacific countries. Resources were mobilized for in-country programming from One United Nations Funds in Cape Verde, Kyrgyzstan, Rwanda and Vietnam and from other sources for Lesotho, Micronesia and Ukraine. The Economic Community of West African States (ECOWAS) also funded some member state initiatives. New donor partnerships were established for youth volunteering in Arab states, IV+10, online volunteering and South-South cooperation.

18. UNV partnered with countries to strengthen their volunteer capacity in support of regional and global sporting and other events. For example, UNV field units from China and Kazakhstan cooperated on a project in which two Chinese experts from the Beijing Olympic Volunteer Programme conducted training of trainers for representatives from 40 NGOs. These representatives in turn trained 100 team leaders who led 3,000 volunteers in Kazakhstan for the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe (OSCE) Summit in 2010 and the Seventh Winter Asian Games in 2011. Aspects of volunteerism were also effectively included in the Palestinian National Youth Strategy and Youth Sports League.

19. UNV developed a database of over 1,500 partner and stakeholder contacts from over 200 countries and territories. This database provides UNV with an excellent tool for continued outreach among its constituents.

20. The year 2011 was also the European Year of Volunteering (EYV2011). UNV built synergies between IYV+10 and EYV2011 by participating in several EYV2011 events at the European Commission, European Parliament and EYV Alliance. Likewise, representatives of European Union institutions supported IYV+10 events.

Key result 1.3. Awareness on volunteerism and its contribution to development raised among UNV key stakeholders

21. UNV proactively raised awareness of the universal nature of volunteerism. The UNV approach emphasized working in concert with key partners and networking, in person and online, with former UN Volunteers who are natural advocates of volunteerism. High profile events were held on International Volunteer Day in about 80 developing and 20 other countries. The multimedia exhibition All Walks of Life: Volunteers of the World was displayed in the main lobby of the United Nations headquarters in New York.

22. Between 30 October and 6 December 2011, UNV organized an online campaign named 'Volunteering Matters' that encouraged people around the world to submit photos to raise awareness of volunteering. The campaign showcased over 1,300 photos depicting voluntary actions in 130 countries. UNV selected 18 finalists whose photos were voted on globally via Facebook. The campaign generated substantial discussion and debate around volunteerism on Facebook and Twitter.

23. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 64/134 proclaiming an International Year of Youth starting in August 2010, UNV played a lead role in advocating the importance of volunteerism within the United Nations Inter-Agency Network on Youth Development, which coordinated the activities of the United Nations system during the year. A fact sheet on youth and volunteerism was prepared and disseminated at the World Youth Conference 2010 in Guanajuato, Mexico. This, along with technical inputs to the draft, resulted in volunteerism being reflected in the conference declaration.

24. UNV enhanced the recognition of volunteerism by participating in events of regional and sub-regional organizations, including the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN), the African Union, ECOWAS and the European Union, providing platforms for recognition and advocacy. UNV was active at important events such as the national dialogue promoting volunteerism law in Mozambique; Second World Summit on Youth Volunteerism in Colombia; youth volunteerism workshops in Uzbekistan in collaboration with UNFPA; regional networking consultations on volunteerism for Barbados and the Eastern Caribbean States; Second Arab Civil Society Forum in Egypt; and National Forum on Volunteerism and the Cambodian Millennium Development Goals. In Ecuador, UNV held a public fair promoting volunteerism to achieve the MDGs, with funding from private telecommunications and consulting companies.

Key result 1.4. Support provided by UNV to increase capacity at national and international levels to formally recognize volunteerism and its contribution to development

25. UNV supported governments in establishing, implementing and strengthening the necessary processes, institutions, laws, policies and programmes to facilitate volunteering and its contribution to peace and development in all its forms.

26. Sustained UNV efforts resulted in the drafting and/or the adoption of legislative frameworks or policies in support of volunteerism and the establishment or implementation of national volunteerism laws, schemes, programmes, networks or strategies in 33 countries, including in Africa (Benin, Burkina Faso, Cape Verde, Kenya, Mali, Mozambique, Namibia, Senegal, Tanzania, Togo, Zambia), Asia and the Pacific (Bangladesh, Cambodia, India, Indonesia, Nepal, Solomon Islands, Sri Lanka, Thailand, Vietnam), the Commonwealth of Independent States (Bosnia and Herzegovina, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Ukraine) and Latin America and the Caribbean (Bolivia, Brazil, Colombia, Dominican Republic, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua, Peru), thus contributing to the strengthening of national voluntary sector capacity. For example, a youth policy that integrated volunteerism was passed in Kosovo and a policy to establish a national volunteer programme was adopted in Benin.

27. In the Philippines, UNDP, UNV and the House of Representatives jointly launched an open forum called ‘Strengthening People’s Participation and Volunteerism Towards Community Development and the Attainment of the MDGs’. The event underscored the passing of a bill and resolution on the role of volunteers, defining the importance of volunteerism (Bayanihan) in nation-building and encouraging private sector partnerships.

B. Integration of volunteerism into peace and development programmes

28. UNV collaborated with United Nations entities, international institutions, regional and national bodies, governments, civil society and the private sector to mainstream volunteerism into peace and development processes and policies.

Key result 2.1. Tools, policies and knowledge generated by UNV to enable development partners to integrate volunteerism into development policies, strategies and programmes, including sectoral/focus area policies and strategies

29. Programme practice notes on volunteerism in peacebuilding, conflict prevention, disaster risk reduction, natural resource management, community-based adaptation and climate change were developed. Other volunteerism practice notes and brochures on local and transitional governance, non-formal education, food security, integration of refugees, returnees and internally displaced persons (IDPs), disaster response, sports for development and civil affairs are in advanced stages of development.

30. The practical guide Drafting and Implementing Volunteerism Laws and Policies: A Guidance Note (2011) was drafted in collaboration with the International Center for Not-for-Profit Law and funded by the Canadian International Development Agency. UNV widely shared the guide with governments, United Nations organizations, civil society and other partners.

31. In Afghanistan, under the UNDP project Enhancing Legal and Electoral Capacity for Tomorrow (ELECT) UN Volunteers enhanced the institutional capacity of the Independent Electoral Commission, media, political parties, domestic observers and other counterparts.

Key result 2.2. Integration of volunteerism in development policies, strategies and programming demonstrated

32. UNV continued working closely with its key United Nations partners to make volunteerism an intentional component of United Nations development assessments, planning frameworks and programme implementation. These include the Common Country Assessment, the United Nations Development Assistance Framework (UNDAF), Post Disaster and Post Conflict Needs Assessments, Technical Assessment Missions, Integrated Strategic Frameworks and Consolidated Appeal Processes.

33. UNV participation in UNDAF processes led to the integration of volunteerism in the formulation, planning and/or implementation of ongoing or new UNDAFs in 35 countries. Volunteerism was also strategically integrated into development policies, plans and programmes of United Nations partners. These efforts resulted in mainstreaming volunteerism in joint programming with UNDP, UNFPA, United Nations Children’s Fund (UNICEF), Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) and UN Women in some 20 countries.

34. The mainstreaming work of UNV has also led to the inclusion of volunteerism in poverty reduction strategy papers (PRSPs) and/or national/regional human development reports in Brazil, Burundi Guatemala, Honduras, Jordan and Nicaragua. In Burundi, the establishment of a national volunteer scheme was included under the second generation PRSP. In the occupied Palestinian territory, UNV helped to integrate volunteerism in the Municipal Alliance Project designed to empower local government and expand public service outreach. UNV was successfully integrated into the United Nations Development Group (UNDG) Arab States strategy.

35. Building on a long partnership with United Nations peacekeeping and peacebuilding operations, UNV participated in and was referenced in the recommendations of the Independent Report on Civilian Capacity in the Aftermath of Conflict (A/65/747-S/2011/85) and continues to follow-up on recommendations. UNV is also working with the Peacebuilding Support Office (PBSO) and has signed a partnership memorandum of understanding with PBSO and UNDP for multi-donor trust funds.

36. In the third quarter of 2011, UNV and the UNDP Bureau of Crises Prevention and Recovery renewed their collaboration and formal partnership and agreed to pool resources in mutually supportive ways for greater impact.

37. UNV continued its strong support to United Nations peacekeeping and peacebuilding operations, working collaboratively with the Department of Peace-Keeping Operations (DPKO), the Department of Field Support (DFS) and United Nations country teams to integrate volunteers and volunteerism into their operations. For example, UNV was involved in the transition from the United Nations Mission in Sudan to its follow-on missions, the United Nations Mission in South Sudan (UNMISS) and the United Nations Interim Security Force in Abyei. UNMISS has adopted a strong community-based approach to implement its mandate, including deploying over 600 international and national UN Volunteers.

38. Under the democratic governance umbrella, UNV was involved in several historical post-conflict electoral processes supported by the United Nations system and the international community. Technical and programmatic support was provided by over 1,000 UN Volunteers in Chad, Côte d'Ivoire, the Democratic Republic of the Congo and Sudan. For the Southern Sudan Referendum, UN Volunteers served as the main United Nations electoral personnel throughout the country.

39. In the area of disaster risk reduction (DRR), UNV provided input to incorporate volunteerism in the Hyogo Framework of Action and produced an advocacy video clip for the International Strategy for Disaster Reduction, depicting the nexus between volunteerism and DRR.

40. By 2011, a joint project of UNV and the Center for Civil Society Studies at Johns Hopkins University entitled 'Reflecting Volunteer Contributions in the System of National Accounts' supported the successful completion of initial non-profit institution satellite accounts by national statistical offices in five countries — Brazil, India, Kyrgyzstan, Mozambique and the Philippines. These ground-breaking national reports profile the size, nature and economic contribution of civil society organizations, including volunteers.

C. Mobilization of volunteers contributing to peace and development

41. In 2010 and 2011, about 7,500 UN Volunteers annually contributed with 7,800 assignments to the strategic objectives of 23 United Nations entities and 18 United Nations missions, often serving in challenging and remote locations and post-conflict situations.

42. A central objective of UNV is to enhance the quality and diversity of UN Volunteer assignments, while increasing assignment numbers to better respond to partners' programmatic requirements.

Key result 3.1. Well-defined, effective and inclusive volunteer management established

43. A new professional experience and skills recruitment taxonomy was developed and validated through testing with over 1,000 candidates and serving volunteers. Implementation will facilitate professional targeting and more precise rostering. The revised taxonomy is a prerequisite for the new Volunteer Management Cycle software. Enhanced self-service features introduced in the registration process and a more comprehensive frequently asked questions section resulted in a 10 per cent decrease in inquiries needing manual responses.

44. To diversify volunteer recruitment, new outreach approaches were tested, for example, targeting Arabic speakers, Haitian diaspora, medical professionals and more deliberate use of former volunteer networks and recruitment partners. A project to broaden the candidate pool and roster diversity was completed with the support of online volunteers who built a directory of 2,000 potential suppliers of volunteer candidates in Latin America and the Caribbean.

45. In 2011, UNV commissioned a desk review of the Transfer of Knowledge Through Expatriate Nationals scheme resulting in policy recommendations for special short-term assignments appropriate for engaging diasporas, retirees, private sector employees and others as volunteers.

46. In line with its youth mandate, UNV also commissioned an in-depth review of its youth volunteer modalities and identified ways to promote greater youth involvement in volunteerism. Findings of this review have inspired the UNV response to the Five-year Action Agenda of the Secretary-General. UNV also concluded a review of its national UN Volunteer modality and developed revised conditions of service and new policy guidance.

47. UNV efforts to identify qualified female volunteer candidates paid off and in 2011 46 per cent of recruited international UN Volunteers were female. UNV continues to submit at least one female candidate per assignment. The overall global percentage of female UN Volunteers increased to 38 per cent. About 28 per cent of volunteers with missions are women.

48. UNV published 'The Volunteer Toolkit' with an initial seven tools designed to enhance the effectiveness of volunteer management as well as the skills of UN Volunteers to become advocates of volunteerism for peace and development.

Key result 3.2. Volunteer engagement in selected focus areas strengthened

49. Through its Online Volunteering service, UNV engaged over 10,500 online volunteers yearly to support, over the Internet, peace and development activities of United Nations entities, NGOs and governments. About 16,000 assignments were conducted on average yearly, a growth of 62 per cent over the previous biennium. The Online Volunteering service continues to be a means of inclusion: in 2011, 60 per cent of online volunteers were from the South, 56 per cent were women, 2 per cent reported having disabilities and 82 per cent were between 18 and 35 years old with an average age of 30. Over 91 per cent of organizations and online volunteers rated their satisfaction with their online collaboration as 'good' or 'excellent' during the biennium.

50. After the Libya crisis broke in 2011, the United Nations Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs relied on the service of hundreds of online volunteers who created and maintained a virtual map showing live information about events in the country. The Libya Crisis Map provided relief organizations with information on health needs, security threats and refugee movements to help them plan humanitarian responses.

Mobilizing for peace

Crisis prevention and recovery

51. UNV deployed over 3,100 UN Volunteers annually to 18 missions, representing over 30 per cent of the international civilian staffing in these missions. UNV ability to rapidly mobilize high volumes of technical expertise across a wide range of substantive and technical functional areas critically bolsters the United Nations ground capacity to execute its complex mandates effectively and efficiently.

52. UN Volunteers also complemented UNDP ground efforts in peacebuilding, conflict prevention, reintegration of refugees/IDPs and ex-combatants, in recovery programmes, transitional justice, dialogue and reconciliation, security sector reform, and capacity-building in countries including Afghanistan, Bangladesh, Brazil, Burundi, Chad, Colombia, Côte d'Ivoire, Congo, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Ecuador, El Salvador, Guinea, Guinea Bissau, Guatemala, Haiti, Liberia, occupied Palestinian territory, Peru, Somalia, Sudan, Timor-Leste, Tunisia, Uganda and Yemen.

53. South Sudan also provides a good example of UNV and UNDP collaboration. During the biennium, the UNDP flagship project Rapid Capacity Placement Initiative relied on over 100 international UN Volunteers to support local government capacity building in the country's 10 states, in areas ranging from treasury and tax revenue to rule of law, justice, legal reform and state administrative management.

54. In Côte d'Ivoire, over 200 UN Volunteers provided support and crucial assistance to the 2010 presidential election, while over 100 UN Volunteers supported the organization of legislative elections. When post-election violence broke out, 70 volunteers stayed behind to provide medical, logistical and other support to the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire. Among these, 25 UN Volunteers supported the running of a 24-hour call line for reporting human rights violations. The call centre registered 320 complaints within a week and 4,300 in the first three weeks of the centre's opening.

55. Over 400 UN Volunteers with the African Union-UN mission in Darfur contributed to ensuring stability in the region and delivery of humanitarian assistance to local populations. In Burundi, international and national UN Volunteers supported socio-economic reintegration of ex-combatants and communities affected by the conflict by promoting community dialogue and micro-projects for the creation of short-term employment, while ensuring equal access of men and women to these opportunities.

Humanitarian assistance

56. In 2011, UNV continued its strong engagement in immediate humanitarian responses to natural disasters, assisting refugee resettlement and integration, and promoting protection of and respect for human rights.

57. In Latin America and the Caribbean, UN Volunteers facilitated resettlement and integration of refugees in Brazil, Ecuador, Peru and Colombia. In Haiti and Pakistan, community disaster prevention and recovery was promoted using a community-centred sustainable development approach. In Haiti, international and national UN Volunteers partnered with the United Nations Human Settlements Programme (UN-Habitat) to set up emergency community and shelter resource centres in the greater Port-au-Prince area to facilitate community-based early recovery activities, such as a cultural restoration project and waste management campaign. Also in Haiti, a joint UNV/UNFPA/UNICEF project was initiated to provide essential reproductive health services for earthquake-affected populations, with a training and capacity development component to address the shortage of skilled midwives.

58. In 2010-2011, some 30 university volunteers were mobilized under the Programme for Human Resource Development in Asia for Peace Building through Volunteer Assignments of the Hiroshima Peacebuilders Centre to serve in 19 countries with 12 United Nations partner organizations and missions. Volunteers worked alongside national counterparts to improve services for marginalized people. Others engaged in peacebuilding initiatives to help build trust among ordinary people within communities and to foster common ground and respect for human rights between conflicting groups.

59. Thirty-seven UN Volunteers provided key support to the United Nations Organization Stabilization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (MONUSCO), UNICEF and UNHCR in the fight against HIV/AIDS and sexual and gender-based violence. These UN Volunteers undertook a wide range of activities, from setting up local inter-agency coordination mechanisms to raising public awareness and conducting capacity building training for community leaders, local associations and national NGOs. For example, in North Katanga, UN Volunteers supported the UNHCR assistance programme for 46,000 Congolese refugees repatriated from Zambia.

Mobilizing for development

Delivery of basic services

60. UNV community development and empowerment interventions helped to enhance community capacity to access basic health services, education and food security. UNV interventions also helped to strengthen local governance, facilitate access to information and build capacities for inclusive and participatory planning processes.

61. International university volunteers worked with local NGOs and local volunteers to help poor communities in Manila, the Philippines to become self-reliant and improve their lives by providing a wide range of services to the urban poor.

62. Health service delivery is one of the major development challenges in the southern Africa region. Trained medical staff have either emigrated or are unwilling to work in rural areas where the prospects for private practices are low. In an effort to address this challenge, UNV in coordination with UNDP supported the governments of Lesotho, Malawi and the provincial government of Limpopo in South Africa to recruit UN Volunteer medical doctors to provide short-term technical relief to hospitals, while providing long-term capacity development to young doctors and paramedics. With 150 UN Volunteers in the three countries medical services improved and knowledge and skills were transferred to national counterparts.

63. UN Volunteers promoted delivery of comprehensive multi-disciplinary HIV care to 5,496 adults and children infected and affected by HIV at 22 service outlets across Guyana, 3,228 of whom were started on antiretroviral treatment at 16 service outlets. Volunteers also delivered prevention services at eight service outlets across the country. In Chad, UNV played a key role in the HIV/AIDS sensitization campaign Soyez prudent! to promote behavioural change and awareness. Some 50 volunteer educators mobilized 1,100 people to be trained as agents of change in their communities.

64. In Trinidad and Tobago, UNV deployed medical doctors to deliver primary and secondary health services throughout the country. Results from an independent mid-term evaluation indicated visible contributions to improving access to and quality of health services provided by the doctors, notably in rural and semi-urban areas.

65. In a One United Nations joint programme in Albania, UN Volunteers introduced a model of participatory planning in local government units where vulnerable Roma and Egyptian communities reside, resulting in improved access to social services and greater community participation in decision-making.

66. In Guinea, 9,500 refugees from Liberia and Sierra Leone were integrated into local communities thanks to national and international UN Volunteers with UNHCR who provided support ranging from legal assistance and income generating activities to delivery of basic services and design and monitoring of crop calendars and agriculture plans for the region.

67. In Kazakhstan, Turkey, Uzbekistan and the Philippines, UNV worked with United Nations entities, governments and civil society organizations to help marginalized groups in very poor neighbourhoods to become self-reliant through improved access to basic services and provision of skills that can help people improve their own lives.

68. Within the MDG campaign of Guinea Bissau, UNV mobilized over 100 local volunteers. Thirty of them engaged in awareness campaigns in hospitals and communities to promote maternal health and fight child mortality and another 20 volunteers supported a campaign to fight HIV/AIDS through sensitization messages. Radio and television programmes also featured monthly programmes demonstrating the role of volunteerism in support of MDG achievement in the country.

Environment and climate change

69. In response to Executive Board decision DP/2008/22, UNV expanded its engagement of volunteers in environment and climate change by promoting community-level adaptation to climate change and raising awareness on environmental issues.

70. For World Environment Day on 5 June, UN Volunteers in many countries, including Haiti and Kosovo, conducted campaigns, produced information materials and held photo competitions to raise awareness about the environment.

71. Under the MDG campaign of Guinea Bissau, 35 local volunteers engaged local communities in a campaign to fight coastal erosion by planting 10,000 trees. In Algeria, during International Volunteer Day on 5 December 2011, 700 volunteers from various local associations cleaned and removed waste from three sites and planted trees in the Bouchaoui forest near Algiers. The activity, which received wide media coverage, strengthened links between participating associations and promoted social responsibility in preservation of the environment.

72. The Community-Based Adaptation Project, a global initiative of UNDP, UNV and the Global Environmental Facility Small Grants Programme is strengthening the resilience of vulnerable communities to climate change. In seven pilot countries (Bolivia, Guatemala, Jamaica, Namibia, Niger, Morocco and Samoa), UN Volunteers mobilized community volunteers, helped partners to develop project ideas and proposals and introduced innovative local development solutions for people, nature and resilient communities. As proof of recognition, the work of the partner association AMSING in Morocco was selected as one of the 25 winners among over 800 candidates for the UNDP Equator Prize 2012.

Cross-cutting issues: gender and youth mainstreaming

73. UNV contributes to the inclusion of women in decision-making, promotes gender-sensitive services and policies and works to prevent sexual and gender-based violence.

74. A joint UNV/UN Women regional project (taking place in Rosario, Argentina, 23 municipalities in Bolivia and Orellana, Ecuador) entitled 'Gender Budgeting and Volunteering through Civic Engagement' documents the impact of volunteering and civic engagement on gender-responsive budgeting and policies. In the three locations, budget allocations for women's rights and gender equality were either maintained or increased despite the global financial crisis, thanks to the advocacy of rural women volunteers, supported by women's organizations and UN Volunteers. In Bolivia, the project resulted in the inclusion of a gender perspective in economic laws and regulations. In Rosario, Argentina, Cochabamba, Bolivia and at the local level in Ecuador the project led women's organizations to exercise social monitoring in established accountability mechanisms.

75. UN Volunteers worked with community volunteers to combat female genital mutilation (FGM). In Guinea Bissau, the Government adopted a law against FGM in June 2011 and in Côte d'Ivoire a movie was produced. In Sudan, cultural mediators sensitized local communities and health professionals to the consequences of FGM on women's health.

76. Partners for Prevention is a regional joint programme of UNDP, UNFPA, UN Women and UNV in Cambodia, India, Indonesia, Pakistan, Thailand, Uzbekistan and Vietnam. UN Volunteers work to prevent violence against women by engaging men and boys in community advocacy campaigns. In India, a UN Volunteer with the Centre for Health and Social Justice mobilizes volunteers and documents case studies for Men's Action for Stopping Violence against Women, a unique volunteer-driven campaign.

77. UN Volunteers conducted protection monitoring and provided capacity building to local authorities, civil society organizations and community networks on prevention and protection against sexual and gender-based violence in Afghanistan, Bangladesh, Bosnia-Herzegovina, Democratic Republic of the Congo, occupied Palestinian territory, Pakistan and Timor-Leste. UN Volunteers helped the United Nations Mission in the Central African Republic and Chad to mobilize 1,500 people in Abeche, Chad as part of an advocacy campaign on the promotion of gender equity.

78. In Guatemala, a United Nations joint programme facilitates institutionalization and implementation of the National Policy for the Promotion and Integral Development of Women through the assignment of UNV liaison officers to each state. The officers coordinate with local authorities and women's departments.

79. Young people are major actors and beneficiaries of UNV programmes. UNV continues to play an important role in establishing national youth volunteer schemes, which are a means of improving youth employability and promoting good citizenship.

80. In Lesotho, UNV supported the Government in implementing the Lesotho National Volunteers Corps Project, which mobilizes unemployed young professionals to support the country's development efforts and provides them with work experience and on-the-job training.

81. In Kyrgyzstan, 12 UN Volunteers and 26 young people from local universities and high schools conducted a five-day action campaign under the theme 'Youth Volunteerism and Environmental Sustainability' aimed at building the volunteering capacity of youth and promoting a culture of environmental governance and civic responsibility.

82. In Guyana, national UN Volunteer peace facilitators contributed to the empowerment of youth, enabling them to become agents of peaceful change in their communities. They achieved peaceful dispute resolution among youth, set ethical standards for volunteering, built social cohesion and got more young people involved in community-based development initiatives.

83. The Youth Employability and Retention Programme in Bosnia and Herzegovina addresses problems of high unemployment and migration among youth by improving their employability and by providing new entry points to the labour market. In partnership with UNDP, UNV is enhancing the capacities of the Public Employment Services to develop and deliver an integrated package of youth employability measures through 16 youth employment centres and 20 national UN Volunteer counsellor-advisors who deliver an integrated package of services, advice and community outreach.

Key result 3.3. Tools, knowledge and guidance provided by UNV enable regional, national and local partners to establish schemes to mobilize and manage volunteers for development

84. Volunteerism is a universal resource for peace, development and the achievement of the MDGs. Member States are especially keen to draw on UNV expertise when establishing youth volunteer schemes.

85. In Afghanistan, UNV assisted the Ministry of Youth Affairs to integrate volunteerism in development and peace reconciliation through participation in the Technical Working Group on Youth. In Uruguay, UNV supported the Ministry of Social Development to attain better utilization of volunteerism as an asset in development processes. An important aspect of this endeavour has been the mobilization of young volunteers for the MDGs in six municipalities together with the publication and release of the handbook Volunteer Management and Training: A Perspective from Uruguay.

86. ECOWAS developed a partnership with UNV for a pilot volunteer programme in Guinea, Guinea Bissau, Liberia and Sierra Leone. 160 ECOWAS volunteers are being deployed in the pilot countries (40 per country), with 26 having arrived in Liberia in November 2011. They are assigned to government institutions mainly in the education and health sectors. UNV contributed to the establishment of the African Union Youth Volunteer Corps to recruit youth to work in all African Union Member States.

87. An invitation from the Sultanate of Oman to UNV to support the establishment of a high-level award for voluntary activities and to serve on the award committee reflects an increasing recognition of volunteerism in the region. The award helped to establish and promote the culture of volunteerism.

88. In Morocco, UNV and UNDP launched several roundtable meetings with volunteer-involving organizations, government and the private sector, resulting in a convention creating the National Centre of Volunteerism in 2010. The centre monitors and accelerates progress on the MDGs by strengthening broad-based action and supporting the promotion of civic engagement in MDG-related policy and practice.

Learning from evaluations

89. UNV embraces evaluation as a means of corporate accountability and learning. In 2010-2011, a total of 10 corporate-level or joint evaluations were conducted, managed or reviewed, including strategic, thematic or project evaluations and reviews, designed to ensure accountability and to support decision-making and continuous programme improvement and knowledge sharing.

90. Project evaluations demonstrated the potential of volunteering for civic participation and mobilization toward addressing community challenges, including governance, social inclusion, youth engagement, environmental protection, community empowerment through income generation, capacity building and skills development.

91. To support efforts to better measure the impact of volunteers and volunteerism, UNV published in 2011 the handbook Assessing the Contribution of Volunteering to Development. This handbook has been widely disseminated among evaluators in various countries and Spanish and French translations are underway. Dissemination of the methodology will help demonstrate volunteerism's added value in development and peace efforts and will help UNV to manage for better results.

92. The key partnership of UNV with DPKO/DFS was the subject of a joint evaluation during the biennium, which was a major contribution toward better integrating volunteers in peacekeeping missions. The evaluation report found that the UNV-DFS partnership played a major role in the rapid engagement of highly skilled and motivated volunteers in peacekeeping worldwide. A taskforce consisting of representatives from UNV and DFS was set up to implement the 11 recommendations made in the report.

III. Management results

93. The Changing Together change management process undertaken by UNV from 2009 to 2010 was completed and resulted in a strengthened organizational structure and improved and streamlined ways of conducting business. These changes helped position UNV to focus more effectively on programmatic needs at country level and increase the impact of its volunteers in the field, while ensuring proper allocation and management of its resources.

94. Changing Together allowed UNV to redefine unit roles, increase specialization and develop mechanisms to deliver as one team. Several new tools were built and processes redesigned to ensure consistent application of UNDP policies and UNV standards for volunteer management. For example, centralization of the critical 'procure-to-pay' process increased control on use of UNV resources while improving efficiency.

95. A communications strategy was finalized in 2010 to strengthen UNV branding and external communications.

Building a knowledge-driven organization

96. Subsequent to the restructuring, a learning plan was adopted to address staff development needs and fill knowledge gaps. The key objective was to enhance UNV staff capacity to engage in programme development in the field by deepening staff knowledge in thematic areas.

97. A Volunteer Learning Specialist was appointed to develop and implement a coherent volunteer learning strategy and enhance UN Volunteers capacity to integrate and promote volunteerism for peace and development.

98. The UNV Portal, launched in 2011, acts as an integrated platform for document and knowledge management. It brings UNV Bonn and its field units under one system to support information sharing and document management. The UNDP Teamworks platform was piloted in a number of UNV-related activities, including IYV+10 and the former volunteer network, to support external knowledge sharing by UN Volunteers. Assessment of those pilots will feed into broader analysis of development of networks and communities of practice for UN Volunteers and partners.

99. In-house environment and gender advisory teams remained active during the biennium. A 'gender-lens' review of various projects and documents was undertaken and is now common practice.

Gender balance and staff well-being

100. UNV continued its efforts to maintain gender balance among its staff, especially for professional posts, of which 55 per cent are filled by males. Overall, 53 per cent of UNV staff are female and senior management is evenly balanced.

101. UNV is committed to maintaining a healthy work life balance for its staff. It supported flexible work arrangements via effective use of mobile and Web-based technologies. Stress and work-life issues were integrated into the corporate learning plan. Supporting staff career development remains a priority, illustrated by internal job rotation and a temporary assignment programme.

Preparation for International Public Sector Accounting Standards

102. UNV strongly supported implementation of International Public Sector Accounting Standards (IPSAS). It ensured that staff were fully aware of the critical importance of IPSAS and provided them with the required training through online courses and Webinars. Several staff also attended intensive classroom training and acted as UNDP trainers.

103. A UNV IPSAS team and focal point coordinated activities internally and liaised with UNDP headquarters ensuring completion of the required preparatory work. UNV business processes impacted by IPSAS were reviewed in detail and changes were made to align with new requirements.

Accountability and risk management

104. When reviewing and revising work processes and individual roles as part of Changing Together, use of and compliance with the UNDP Internal Control Framework was among the primary objectives. UNV issued new and individualized delegation of authority letters to all staff to cover and inform them of new rights, responsibilities and accountabilities.

105. UNV invested in new technology to provide a robust platform to support and back up its business and communications.

Financial resources

106. The total value of services provided by UNV – directly and through United Nations organizations and entities, including DPKO/DFS – increased in the biennium by 10 per cent to $473 million. Annex 2 provides a financial overview of UNV, which complements UNDP financial, budgetary and management reports of the Administrator.

107. Donor contributions for UNV direct programme activities increased by 12 per cent to $38.8 million in 2010-2011 from $34.7 million in 2008-2009 as the impact of the global financial crisis eased. Several donors increased their contributions and some new donors started supporting UNV, including programme countries, as UNV expanded its full-funding volunteer scheme and increased its outreach to non-traditional donors.

108. Regrettably, contributions to the Special Voluntary Fund, which is critical for continued advocacy of volunteerism and innovation in volunteer mobilization modalities and the development of knowledge products, declined 14 per cent after a similar decline in the previous biennium.

Effective support to the United Nations in Bonn

109. UNV proactively promoted increased collaboration among United Nations entities in Bonn to achieve better results using existing resources. This led to an improved governance structure at the operational and executive level of the UNV-managed Common Services, which include coordination of host government relations, management of shared premises and facilities, and expansion into common procurement, information communication technology infrastructure and human resources services.

Management audit

110. In 2010, UNV underwent a comprehensive management audit conducted by the UNDP Office of Audit and Investigation (OAI).

111. As a firm validation of changes made by the organization following the Changing Together process and the overall soundness of its operations, UNV was assessed by OAI as “satisfactory”. This implies that the “internal controls, governance and risk management processes were adequately established and functioning well. No issues were identified that would significantly affect the achievement of the objectives of the audited entity”.

IV. Challenges and opportunities

112. IYV+10 opened avenues to strengthen partnerships, develop new ones, further national and global policy agendas and increase recognition of volunteerism and the role of UNV. The year underscored the ample opportunities that exist to further strengthen and expand the relevance and impact of UNV. The main challenge will be to realize these opportunities, and in the process address organizational and institutional challenges that still remain.

Privileges and immunities

113. The functional privileges and immunities of all international UN Volunteers are a fundamental precondition for their service. While existing host country agreements of UNDP, DFS/DPKO and other United Nations organizations explicitly refer to UN Volunteers, global coverage is lacking and a considerable number of UN Volunteers may not enjoy the necessary status. As this is an impediment for expanding the mobilization of UN Volunteers for United Nations activities on a long-term basis, UNV is constantly striving toward global coverage of all international UN Volunteers by privileges and immunities. Support of Member States for this endeavour is critical.

Financial sustainability and institutional impact

114. The UNV business model relies partly on resources drawn from volunteer mobilization. The UNV strategy is to gradually increase its overall development effectiveness and relevance and the sustainability of its operations through increased mobilization of UN Volunteers and careful cost recovery for all services provided.

Safety and security of UN Volunteers

115. Over 50 per cent of UN Volunteers work in medium to high risk environments. To prepare UN Volunteers and minimize security and safety risks in the field, all UN Volunteers undertake the pre-deployment safety and security online training of the Department of Safety and Security. Local security training upon arrival at the duty station is also provided. Nevertheless, UN Volunteers have been affected by high volatility in security situations worldwide, despite being fully integrated in the United Nations security system. UNV reports seven tragic deaths in Haiti, Democratic Republic of the Congo and Côte d'Ivoire.

OpportunitiesThe Five-year Action Agenda of the Secretary-General

116. The Action Agenda of the Secretary-General with its five generational opportunities offers unquestionably the greatest opportunity to UNV to participate actively in realizing the Secretary-General's vision, consolidate its youth activities (as per General Assembly resolution 31/131) and offer volunteer options to a population with a still largely untapped potential.

117. A key UNV priority in 2012 and beyond is to support the Action Agenda to "address the needs of the largest generation of young people the world has ever known" and to engage youth, particularly young women, as volunteers and agents for sustainable development and peace in their communities and societies. A youth programme strategy is being developed based on lessons learned from the on-going Arab Youth Volunteering for Better Future initiative in six Arab countries, which is already part of the UNDG Arab States strategy. UNDP and UNV intend to take the lead within UNDG in helping to operationalize the Secretary-General's agenda for youth by focusing on capacity development, national ownership and community and youth empowerment and employability.

118. General Assembly resolution 66/67, paragraph 24, looks forward to a full report on the celebration of IYV+10, as well as recommendations to further integrate volunteering in peace and development during the next decade and beyond. This is an opportunity to continue promoting the volunteering agenda; consultations are already under way regarding volunteering's relevance to the Rio+20 outcome document and the upcoming MDG summit to be organized by the General Assembly in 2013.

Youth Volunteer Corps

119. Prior to the announcement of the Action Agenda of the Secretary-General, UNV had conducted a review of its existing youth schemes (university volunteers and volunteer interns). It then developed a concept for the establishment of a youth volunteer corps and identified support functions required. Youth volunteers do not bring the same skills as volunteer specialists and require more intense preparation, guidance and follow-up to ensure optimum benefits to them and society from the volunteer experience. Therefore, UNV suggests establishing a Youth Volunteer Corps Trust Fund to develop training materials, define assignment modalities (including security considerations) and undertake the fielding and administration of increasing numbers of young volunteers.

120. The ability of UNV to respond successfully to the Action Agenda of the Secretary-General and engage along with other United Nations entities in system-wide policy and programme priority setting would be strengthened – and the contributions of volunteerism to peace and development optimized – if the higher profile of the UNV programme, including the level of its Executive Coordinator, were appropriately acknowledged.

Gender

121. Building on positive experiences in 2011, UNV will continue to emphasize selection of female volunteers, including youth volunteers, to progressively achieve a gender balance among UN Volunteers and maintain the balance among its staff.

Partnership expansion

122. In a rapidly changing development cooperation environment, UNV will continue to promote more diversified programmatic partnerships, including with non-traditional donors, private sector enterprises and foundations.

123. The UNDP Administrator believes that the publication of the State of the World's Volunteerism Report, the Secretary-General's focus on youth and the active discussion around a post-2015 development agenda provide opportunities for UNV to demonstrate the value added of volunteering for peace, development and the greater well-being of societies. With this in mind, the Administrator calls for continued support to the programme.
