Innovations and Knowledge

UNV will also focus on building a credible body of knowledge informed by research, innovation and evidence in order to advocate and enhance the integration of volunteerism into peace and development programming.

Why partner with UNV?

The fundamental lack of understanding of the role of volunteering and the potential of volunteers in the face of global change must be tackled by UNV and partners in order to bring the value to light in the new development era. This is done through consolidating innovation, advocacy and research.

In the Framework period, UNV will lead in consolidating volunteer knowledge, advocacy and innovation as a convener on volunteer issues.
RESEARCH

Given the critical gaps in the evidence base for the contributions of volunteerism to peace and development, a key focus during this Strategic Framework period will be to work with partners from academia and other volunteer-involving organizations to develop a global research agenda on volunteerism.

This will involve strengthening collaboration and cultivating research in the global South, continuing the publication of the State of the World’s Volunteerism Reports, and enhancing the measurement of volunteering at national levels, especially in developing contexts. In this context, consultations will strengthen dialogue in areas that require evidence building to enable the positioning of volunteerism as a credible development paradigm.

INNOVATION

At the heart of innovation at UNV is a commitment to creativity and engagement in addressing local challenges through volunteer action. UNV, as a catalyst, knowledge broker and convener, seeks to leverage volunteer knowledge, research and technology to develop innovative solutions that improve the quality of life at community level.

In the context of the post-2015 development framework, volunteerism is an essential mechanism to strengthen participation. For this participation to be inclusive, diverse and accessible forms of volunteerism are needed to enable people to contribute to peace and development.

In keeping with the Strategic Framework, the goal of UNV is to expand the global reach of the UNV Online Volunteering service, doubling the number of UN Online Volunteers mobilized to 22,000 by 2017.

UNV will also explore innovative methods to ensure the broadest possible participation of people at all levels to influence policy development and monitoring.

In keeping with the Strategic Framework, the goal of UNV is to expand the global reach of the UNV Online Volunteering service. Every year, around 11,000 UN Online Volunteers contribute to peace and sustainable development through the UNV Online Volunteering service.

Online Volunteering allows the development community to tap into a wide range of skills and expertise, opening a door to students, retirees and people engaged in the labour market who wish to contribute to a meaningful cause. This includes those in the corporate private sector, for example, who wish to volunteer online while pursuing a demanding career. Online volunteering is also particularly accessible to people with disabilities, who might otherwise have been excluded from such engagement.

Innovative forms of volunteering, combining onsite and online opportunities, have an enormous potential to increase the depth and breadth of civic engagement. Over the next few years, UNV will translate the knowledge and experience of working with new technologies into a more impactful and innovative methodology, bringing on board more voices from civil society on human development.
Knowledge is one of the fundamental building blocks to bringing the importance and impact of volunteerism to the forefront. Through its programmes and partnerships, UNV offers a strong knowledge base on the value of volunteerism, a broad and effective partnership base, especially in terms of engagement with civil society at all levels; increased capacities to enable volunteer engagement in development processes; a focus on excluded groups and populations; and opportunities to advance South-South collaboration.

UNV will build on this knowledge to support the positioning of volunteerism at national, regional and global levels, in order to contribute to an enabling environment for volunteerism. For example, UNV is developing a concept on volunteer knowledge that aims to tap into volunteer creativity and engagement by supporting innovation and facilitating knowledge sharing and learning around volunteerism. This initiative will contribute to the already existing UNV Learning Strategy, which fosters the creation of opportunities to translate volunteer knowledge into learning. The main objective is to showcase the many ways in which volunteerism and volunteer engagement can strengthen peace and development projects.

POST-2015 SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT AGENDA

As the post-2015 sustainable development agenda takes shape, UNV has significantly contributed to the unprecedented UN system efforts to widen opportunities for dialogue. People from all walks of life were invited to express their priorities for the new agenda through the MY World survey and the consultations organized by the United Nations Development Group. UNV mobilized UN Volunteers and UN Online Volunteers who engaged communities in reflecting on ways to address sustainable development challenges.

Overall, together with stakeholders, UNV has been advocating for the integration of volunteerism into the discussions about the new agenda. In particular, the organization has underlined the importance of volunteer groups as development actors, and of volunteerism as a mechanism to be considered more systematically in development planning and implementation processes, to enhance effectiveness and sustainability.
Integrating volunteerism in the next decade: Ten-Year Plan of Action 2016-2025

In February 2016, the UN General Assembly adopted the Resolution on “Integrating volunteering into peace and development: the plan of action for the next decade and beyond”, co-facilitated by Brazil and Japan and co-sponsored by 100 Member States.

The Resolution recognizes that volunteerism can be a powerful means of implementation for the 2030 Sustainable Development Agenda and welcomes the integration of volunteerism in the 2030 Agenda and in related key documents. In the Resolution, the General Assembly also acknowledges the Plan of Action to integrate volunteering in peace and development during the next decade and beyond, calling upon Member States, the UN system and a wide range of stakeholders to support and resource the Plan, and recognizes UNV as the appropriate UN entity to support its implementation. The Resolution invites UNV to collaborate with partners such as the International Federation of the Red Cross and Red Crescent (IFRC) to organize a global meeting in 2020 to further strengthen the engagement and contributions of volunteers for the 2030 Agenda, and concludes requesting the Secretary-General to report in three years to the General Assembly on further progress and on the Plan of Action.

“In ten years’ time, we see UNV as developing more innovative practices within volunteering and championing innovative practices from around the world... and as a champion for reverse innovation (innovation that flows from South to North).”

UNV 2014 Partnership Survey feedback

The United Nations Volunteers (UNV) programme contributes to peace and development through volunteerism worldwide. We work with partners to integrate qualified, highly motivated and well supported UN Volunteers into development programming and promote the value and global recognition of volunteerism.

UNV is active in around 130 countries every year. With field presences in over 80 countries, UNV is represented worldwide. UNV is administered by the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP).
