- The political context of South Sudan remains unpredictable following the 15 December 2013, armed violence that erupted in the capital city of Juba and has quickly spread through the country, affecting four of the country’s ten states, namely Jonglei, Upper Nile, Unity and Central Equatorial States. Since December 2013, the conflict has devastated the lives of millions of South Sudanese and displaced more than 2 million people. About 1.5 million of them have been displaced internally in South Sudan and over 500,000 are refugees in neighboring countries.

20 Feb 2020
Juba is a family duty station.
Staff is expected to commute daily to work from home.
Periodic deep field missions expected under challenging conditions in some areas across South Sudan.

Contexte organisationnel & description du projet

UNHCR is mandated agency to provide international protection and solutions to refugees, and refugee returnees (See ExCom Concls. Nos. 18 (XXXI) (1980); 40 (XXXVI) (1986); 74 (XLV) (1994); and 101 (LV) (2004), and UNHCR Handbook on Voluntary Repatriation: International Protection, Geneva, 1996”. In South Sudan, UNHCR has been monitoring South Sudanese Spontaneous refugee returns since November 2017, and after the Signing of Revitalised peace agreement in November 2018, been working with Government of South Sudan’s Relief and Rehabilitation Commission (the RRC) to monitor Refugee returns across South Sudan. Where as UNHCR maintains a non return advisory policy as conditions for dignified and sustainable returns are not yet safe, UNHCR recognises the right of refugees to return to their homes, and have continued to monitor conditions in which the refugees are spontaneously returning to. In 2019, UNHCR through partnership agreement with Government’s RRC and 07 Local and International NGO partners deployed enumerators across 36 strategic border points and return corridors as well monitoring and assessing conditions in return areas. UNHCR provides capacity development of the partner staff and government officials to enhance protection monitoring and assessments. The UNV National Position is central to the organisation’s approach to capacitate national teams capable of responding to continued and expected increase in refugee returns, particularly when peace holds.
